

Present Tense: A Journal of Rhetoric in Society

Present Tense is currently seeking submissions for its upcoming issue. We are a peer-reviewed, blind-refereed, online journal dedicated to exploring contemporary social, cultural, political and economic issues through a rhetorical lens. Present Tense publishes short articles of 2,000-2,500 words, the length of a conference paper. We also encourage conference-length multimedia submissions such as short documentaries, flash videos, interviews and podcasts, as well as reviews that are thematically related to the goals of the journal.

The list below suggests topics for submissions:

For formatting and submission information, please refer to our submission guidelines at: www.presenttensejournal.org/submissions. If you have any questions about submitting to Present Tense, please contact our staff at editors@presenttensejournal.org.